RICHMOND, VA., September 7, 1878. Editors of the Dispatch: Dear Sirs,—1. Please be kind enough to tell me what kind of officer the Lord Lyon King at Arms of Scotland was, and

2. Also, if there are any living descendhis duties? ants of Sir Waiter Scott; if so, please tell me their names, and where they reside. I have asked the latter question of you, but have misplaced the paper and forgotten the answer. Yours, &c., IGNOBANCE. ANSWERS. 1. "Lyon King-at-Arms" was the principal heraldic official in Scotland. He held the position by commission under the great seal. He has six subordinate heralds. We presume that his duties were similar to those of the King-at-Arms of England, which were to direct the heralds, preside at their chapters, and have the jurisdiction of the armory. 2. Sir Walter Scott's oldest daughter married Mr. Lockbart, and their daughter married James Robert Hope, who took by law the name of Hope-Scott. Mrs. Hope-Scott died in 1858. Her only surviving child, Mary Monica, born in 1852, was a few years ago (and we presume still is) the owner of Abbottsford. She is the last lineal descendant of Sir Walter.

Denis Kearney's auditors, says the Providence Journal, are more generous with their cheers than with their purses. They listen to his blasphemous harangues and answer them with shouts and hurrahs, some sincere and some ironical; but when the time for passing around the hat arrives they suddenly disperse. The correspondent of the New York Times gives the following account of the effect which the appeal for money made upon his audience in Newark, where he made one of his most violent harangues:

"Jacocks said Kearney was a poor man, and had no money to carry him along. He was working for their good, and deserved to be supported. For that purpose the hat would be sent round and a collection taken up. A discharge of grape-shot at pointblank range, a charge of cavalry, or the most terrific storm that ever swept over the City of Mosquitoes, could not have caused a greater stampede than did the announcement of Mr. Jacocks. He called on them not to go, but they had stready fled, and Kearney, seeing the unkind desertion of his followers, put on his coat and retired in apparent disgust."

THE WILKES COUNTY GREENBACK CONVEN-TION .- Twelve Greenbackers met in convention in Wilkesboro' Saturday for the purpose of organizing a Greenback party in this congressional district. The Convention met on the day appointed for Colonel Armfield to speak at Wilkesboro', and consequently there was a large crowd in the town. When the meeting was called to order William Coleman, late Attorney-General under Holden, ranted for two hours, and his remarks fell as flat as a pancake. At the conclusion of Mr. Coleman's remarks Mr. W. H. Crawford was introduced. He said be didn't know whether he was a candidate for Congress or not, and he, too, ranted about greenbacks. Colonel Armfield was then called for, who handled the Greenbackers and Radicals with gloves off. He told the people that this was a Radical the highest terms by all who heard him. When he concluded there wasn't enough left of the Greenback movement to make a thoughts they do hav. greasy spot .- Statesville Landmark.

WOFUL DEFEAT FOR A GREENBACKER .-Rutland, Vt., September 6.- The result of the election in the State, with nine small towns to hear from, is as follows: Proctor, 36,888; Bingham, 16,735; and Martin, 3,-069. Counting the vote of the nine small towns the same as 1876 makes Proctor's plurality over Bingham 20,211, and the majority over Martin, Greenbacker and Independent, 17,142.

With tender trembling touch
Kiss her leir brow to-night;
And stars that beam with such
A loving, living light,
Look in her eyes to-night
And say this much—
"He dreams of thee to-night!"

O whispering trees above.
With softly shinting leaves.
Breathe low, "Oh, sweet, oh, loye!
He dreams of thee and weaves
All thoughts in one—thy love!"

O waves that plash below.
Catching the stars's weet smile.

Not always have thy accents, loud and voluble,
Man's fearful neart with dreadful terror stirred?
Has your harsh rule
Always impelled him, with emotions fleet,
To fly the londing of thy later feet?
Say, rentle mule? Say, gentle mule?

Speak, mule,
Why didst thou, with intense vitality
Lift through the hingeless roof of yorder shed
A man; an earth-born child of immortality.
Because he passed thee with incautious tread?
He was no fool,
That base-born, soulless mule should kick him. He was a scholar; an A. M., a Ph. D., a D.—Oh!! Whoa, mule!!!
